"Someday" Big Fred Hewett used to say in his Humboldt Saloon in Aberdeen, Washington, "these pictures will show how the boys used to do it." He knew the day would come when the Pacific Northwest's "Big Woods" would be only a fog-blurred memory and the cry "Logs! More Logs!" would no longer be heard ringing up and down the skidroads. With the superb views of timber photographer Darius Kinsey, comprising more than 200 pictures made from wet plate celluloid negatives, 11" x 14", and processed by his pioneer wife, Tabitha, author Andrews dramatically presents a panorama of lumbering's great days in these woods from 1890 to 1925. Shown in sharp detail are the first axes, 12-foot crosscut saws, the first oxen and horses, the first donkey engines and "lokeys". Then the story continues into the "highball" days, the high production period with the steel tower skidders and miles of steel rigging.

Olivia Dickert:

As a scholar exactly feel bored in order to reading. If their teacher asked them to go to the library as well as to make summary for some publication, they are complained. Just very little students that has reading's heart and soul or real their leisure activity. They just do what the teacher want, like asked to the library. They go to at this time there but nothing reading critically. Any students feel that examining is not important, boring and also can't see colorful pictures on there. Yeah, it is to be complicated. Book is very important in your case. As we know that on this age, many ways to get whatever we want. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore , this This Was Logging can make you sense more interested to read.
