There are so many wonderful things that each individual on the planet can wheel into his/her existence. This capability transcends race, age, sex, creed, disability, social, economic or political status but so many are bogged down by ideals, belief systems and labels. These things serve as anchors to the soul, leaving the soul in misery. Miserable in this sense is not prolonged periods of sadness, misery is about being consistently detached from your essence, your "Ase", the life force inside you that holds talent, wisdom and abundance unique to you. The Call to Courage exposes some of the societal, mental and emotional "anchors" to the human spirit. The author Twilight Ma'at writes from her unique experience as an inner city youth born and raised on the south side of Chicago. Twilight Ma'at also offers "The Call to Courage" as the first volume of her soon to be series: "Back to Ase". This manuscript features insights strong enough to relate to a mystic, sage, healer or spiritualist but down to earth enough for the every day working class individual. Take a journey with Twilight Ma'at as she inspires and cultivates critical thinking and an out of the box mentality.
