A novelette about a flying saucer spacecraft from elsewhere in the galaxy that suddenly appears in Earth orbit. It deliberately reveals itself to the entire world. It broadcasts an audio message to every radio and TV station stating it is here on a friendly benevolent mission. The spacecraft lands on Tiananmen Square in Beijing, China, and requests worldwide communications links to deliver advice to all Earthlings on how they can avoid an impending total life ending threat arising through terrorist acts.

A being similar in form to humans, displays a device with remarkable properties, allowing instantaneous automatic language translation for all Earth languages. The device is a gift to all Earthlings. The device even works for languages used on two planets outside our solar system.

One of the four spacecraft occupants delivers two suggestions on how to avoid near certain Earth civilization destruction with possible total life extermination. Both suggestions if implemented will require very deep and far-reaching fundamental changes in human behavior.

Two wildly different looking spacecraft occupants each appear and relate to Earth details about their own home world. They tell how their adoption of the same two suggestions is positively affecting their own civilization and planet.
