What if God wants to use the little ones around your dining room table to cure diseases, preach the Gospel, or become the future President of the United States? What if your child could spend their formative years building a future, because you were just nuts enough to ask God for this kid's purpose and then prepare them for it ahead of time? What if you could change the lineage in your family tree to include servant leaders who reach the height of all God created them to be and do? In Please God Don't Let Me Screw This Up!, Lynette Reback shares the most important parenting lessons that each of her fifteen children have taught her. She believes that God is going to do His greatest work through the moms and dads of this generation who will raise up some planet-shaking prodigies. Through her unique lens of simultaneously mothering fifteen children at every stage of development -- from age two to age twenty -- she offers her tips, strategies, and principles on how to raise a dynamic, creative, and hard-working child through focusing on family, purpose, joy, and faith.
